Local taxpayers share concerns at workshop

by Susan Grober

Taxpayers have been forced to tighten their belts in this poor economy, and they expect county council to do the same.

That was the message from close to 70 people who turned out to the Haliburton Legion Hall last Friday night for Tax Rally-2, a workshop sponsored by the Haliburton County Taxpayers Coalition to sort through county council's draft budget for 1992.

Previously, Coalition organizers said they wanted people with sharp minds and sharp pencils to turn out for the workshop. They got their wish.

Those in attendance expressed concern over a variety of items in the draft budget, from an allocated $3,200 to pay for the annual Warden's banquet, to $100,000 budgeted to build a transportation shed at Eagle Lake.

MC Bill Payne and Coalition organizers Gary Kenney and John Beachli were joined on the panel by Dysart's reeve and deputy-reeve, Chris Hodgson and Curry Bishop, Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardner, Minden Deputy-Reeve Lewis Stevens, Snowdon Reeve and County Warden George Simmons, and the county's Chief Administrative Officer, Gary McKnight.

In opening, Beachli said the purpose of the workshop was for a sharing of ideas on how to "get this monkey off our back — the monkey being the tax burden."

As costs go up, profits fall, jobs are lost, people end up on welfare, "and it's all a vicious circle leading back to costs going up," said Beachli.

He said taxpayers must take some responsibility and find out how their tax dollars are being spent, instead of leaving everything up to the government. "Are we demanding too much, or are we being forced into spending on things we can't afford?" he asked.

Kenney pointed out a graph which showed how, since 1989, taxes have increased by 40 per cent, while the county's tax base has only increased by 6.3 per cent. He asked those in attendance if their incomes have increased by 40 per cent since 1989.

There were few angry moments during the meeting — rather than try to skewer county council, the purpose of the workshop was to share concerns and ideas on how tax dollars should be spent.

Payne commended county council for

Committee nixes alternative accommodation plan

by Susan Grober

The board of education's management committee has, in effect, rejected an alternative school accommodation plan recently proposed by two Minden residents.

Members of the management committee — who are all trustees — don't finalize decisions, but instead make recommendations to the board of education.

Doug Campbell and Bryan Kernohan's accommodation plan, which would keep Grade 7, 8 and 9 students in Minden and save the board $1.6 million, was proposed during a public meeting in Minden last month, and the board referred the matter to the management committee for more discussion.

The committee briefly considered the proposal during its meeting last Wednesday. But members ended up making a recommendation that the board increase the number of classrooms planned for an addition to Archie Stouffer Elementary School to accommodate a mandated junior Kindergarten program.

This Archie Stouffer addition is part of the board's current $7.6 million plan to add eight classrooms to Archie Stouffer, build a new Kindergarten to Grade 6 school in Haliburton village, and turn J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School in Haliburton into a junior high school for the entire county.

The committee's recommendation to add a total of 12 classrooms to Archie Stouffer will be considered by the board during its March 24 meeting.

Committee member Wayne Wood also recommended that letters be sent to Campbell and Kernohan, thanking them for their "excellent effort" in drawing up the proposal, which would create a junior high school with 16 classrooms in Minden and add 12 classrooms to J.D. Hodgson.

Wood said the proposal has its merits, but added, "As far as I'm concerned, I'm not going to change my mind one bit."

Wood also said he was upset by a letter Minden council sent to the board, urging trustees to reconsider its previous decision. Wood felt council was overstepping its bounds by writing the letter to the board.

However, council's letter states that the municipality is mandated through its official plan to ensure that adequate institutional, educational and social facilities for all interest groups are encouraged.

"Accordingly, council is very anxious to assist the Board of Education with development on the Minden Site that will adequately meet the needs of our taxpayers," read the letter, signed by all members of council.

LeRoy Eager also commended Campbell and Kernohan for the effort, but said he felt their proposal only addressed positive aspects of the option, and ignored any negative points. "They've done a great job of riding the fence," he said.

He said a plan similar to Campbell and Kernohan's was initially drawn up years before, when Stuart Baker was director of education, but the board turned it down because it would make the school too big.

Eager added that the Minden residents' proposal didn't include information on transportation, wage increases, and staff changes.

Before approving the chosen option last October, the board "looked at all angles," said Eager. "They (Campbell and Kernohan) didn't."

Business Administrator Jim Bradley said

the board's chosen option gives Grade 9 students the advantage of using the late bus and taking part in sports activities and social functions.

He also said there wouldn't be enough students in the west half of the county to fill a junior high school.

Also, to leave Grade 9 students in Minden

Cabbie fears end of bylaw means end of business

by Susan Grober

The operator of a local taxi company says Minden council's recent decision to rescind all taxi bylaws could put him out of business.

Chris Maskell, owner of Minden Taxi, says now anyone can run a taxi service without having to follow such costly regulations as having to pay special taxi insurance.

"It kind of makes things open season," Maskell told The Times last week. "People pay top dollar for taxi insurance. But now if Joe Blow wants to buy a $200 car and buy regular insurance, he can run a cab company."

Minden Clerk Tammy McKelvey said the municipality has had a taxi bylaw for several years in order to licence those businesses.

When a revised bylaw was recently drafted and sent to the municipality's solicitor for comments, the municipality was told the law does not require that it control the operation of taxis.

Although the Municipal Act states council may pass such a bylaw, council felt it was less trouble to rescind the matter altogether.

Maskell said now a cab driver can get away with just having regular car insurance if he happens to get stopped by the police. "But if he gets in an accident, that's another story. Then the passenger can sue the driver."

The bylaw was rescinded by council during its last meeting. Maskell said the municipality didn't advise him about council's plan. And by the time he found out about it, it was too late for him to be put on the agenda that

Taxpayers keep tabs on county budget

County council was well represented during last Friday's draft 1992 budget workshop sponsored by the Haliburton County Taxpayers Coalition.

Inquest into Bannon murder won't be held

The Regional Coroner's Office in Peterborough has decided not to hold an inquest into the death of Camarvon teenager Sandy Bannon.

The 17-year-old was shot last October by her father Ken, who later took his own life.

Dr. Alan Davidson, a Bracebridge psychiatrist who treats patients in Haliburton County, had requested a coroners' inquest into Sandy Bannon's death as a vehicle to investigate the causes of family violence.

But last Friday Regional

Coroner Dr. Peter Clark told The Times that an inquest would not be called at this time, although he said it's possible the decision could change.

He would not give any reasons for the decision.

agreeing to open the 1992 budget to the public before making its final decision on the matter. "They've bent over backwards," he said of county council members.

McKnight stressed that none of the figures discussed have been approved by county council, since the budget is still in its draft form.

Many aspects of the budget came under fire. And county council will be expected to provide answers for the barrage of questions posed at the meeting.

For example, people wanted to know how much has been spent so far on the official plan, and how much more will be spent until it's finally completed.

The draft expenses for the official plan total $141,860, covering salaries and benefits, travel, materials, consultant fees and capital. Since revenue makes up more than half of that total, the net cost is listed at $71,038.

Some wanted to know if all the work done on the plan so far will be lost if council puts it on hold until the economy improves.

Some questioned whether the plan is really necessary. Even though council has stressed that the province will hold-off on planning matters such as severances until an official plan is in place, Kenney said the county has never received any written proof.

"If there's nothing on paper," one man asked, "why are we spending $150,000 a year?"

People also questioned whether the county's economic development program is worthwhile.

Kenney asked what new jobs have been created through the program. Mark Stagg said he couldn't name any jobs which have been created, but added the department has been instrumental in saving 20 to 25 jobs. "And that's probably just as important."

Stagg said he helped these people by providing technical information, and "to make sure the bankers didn't pull the rug out from under them."

Some wondered why four extra council meetings are planned, increasing that part of the budget 36 per cent to $20,400.

Yet another bone of contention for some of the taxpayers is the $3,200 budgeted for the annual Warden's banquet, and $1,000 for the Christmas party.

When asked whether the parties could be made ticketed events, Warden Simmons said he respects past-warden Carol Puffer for refusing a banquet, but he added that the banquet is the county's way of recognizing the representation and contribution the warden provides.

Some said the banquet expense is too small to worry about. Others felt it should be eliminated.

One man maintained it is a frivolous expense that taxpayers can't afford to cover. "I've had to cut out things, vacations or whatever," he said. "Everybody else has had to cut out things because there isn't any money."

By the end of the evening, Coalition organizers felt the workshop was a success. "This is democracy in action," said Beachli. "It's perhaps the Canadian spirit that's going to help us chisel away at those items which must be chiselled. We want to see a downward curve in the next few years, because our incomes have gone down. We must get our costs in control before they gobble us up."

Kenney said it's now important to take control and flatten the curve. Referring to a budget increase, he said: "Twenty per cent is unacceptable, 15 per cent is unacceptable, 10 per cent is unacceptable. Zero per cent is our goal."

The next move for the Coalition is to use the information gathered at the workshop during the planned individual 10-minute presentations to county council on March 10.

Chris Maskell, owner and operator of Minden Taxi, objects to Minden council's recent decision to rescind all taxi bylaws.

Taxi cab company owner plans to petition council

night to object.

Although he's angered that he wasn't notified, Maskell hasn't given up hope, and plans to petition council to change its decision.

He said the licensing of cabs is important, not only to his company, but for customers as well.

Maskell said those taxi drivers without special insurance can now afford to drop the cost of their fares.

But, because he insists on having a more comprehensive insurance plan, the fares offered by Maskell's company will have to be higher. "All we want to do is protect our business."

Unfortunately, he feels the majority of customers will opt for a cab company which offers the lower price.

"There's no special law governing prices, and now no law to say how safe a vehicle has to be, or how clean it must be," said Maskell.

"That bylaw kept the municipality on top of insurance, and we were hoping they would put a ceiling on cab fares."

Maskell said Dysart recently revised its taxi bylaw, and added:

"It's funny how Haliburton goes to one extreme to re-do its laws, and then Minden bows out... Now I hear a guy in Haliburton is going to bring cabs into Minden."

Although he understands that the municipality isn't required to licence cabs, Maskell feels "totally abandoned" by council in its decision.

"This business has been around for 30 years, and we have a pretty good clientele... Now that you don't need a licence to drive a cab, it has put us in a business that's not worth a plug nickel."

BOE to have final say on plan

wouldn't solve the problem of accommodating high school students from schools in the east end of the county, Bradley said.

"Personally, I think the proposal was very well done," said Bradley. "I maintain it has some valid points. But I don't really believe it addresses the overall county."

Bradley said the board must go with "not necessarily what's best for Minden, but what's good for the county."

Wally Bunn said the board's main objective at present is to take its primary level students out of the Archie Stouffer annex, and into the main school building. That is the purpose of the addition plan, he said.

"If we can get all the kids, Grade K to 8, in the Minden school, then that's what we've promised, and that's what we've done," said Bunn.

As for the additional four classrooms which the committee feels are necessary for the implementation of junior Kindergarten at Archie Stouffer, the board will be asked to include this in its capital forecast submission to the province.

At the meeting, John Munro expressed concern that these extra classrooms would defeat the board's aim to keep each school's enrollment under 650 students.

"My only concern is we're building a school that's going to hold more pupils than what we set as our upper limit," said Munro.

He also wanted it known that, philosophically, he is against the board's original plan. "I am opposed to busing kids from one of our major communities to another community," Munro said.

However, Munro said he feels the plan is the best option for the board to take in order to adequately accommodate all students in Haliburton County.

Following the meeting, Campbell told The Times he was "disgusted" by the committee's handling of the matter.

Campbell said he doesn't feel the proposal was taken seriously by members of the committee.

"The thrust of our proposal was to save the money of the taxpayers — not to throw it away like drunken sailors," he said. "If the management board members read the proposal, they would have picked up on that."

Campbell objected to comments that he and Kernohan only included positive aspects of their suggested plan in their proposal.

He said the proposal was only offered to the board as a suggestion.

"The reason was to have the board stop in its tracks, re-open the matter, identify the problems and come to a solution. That was the thrust of our presentation right from square one, and they certainly had no intention to do that."

Campbell also objected to Eager's comment that his proposal ignored such aspects as staffing for teaching and principals, and administrative staff. He said the board's plan also failed to include these costs.

Who should control the fish?

Ontario's fish stocks, which are currently under public ownership, may be part of native negotiations

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

As Canada's constitutional negotiations shift into high gear, the question of the inherent right of native populations to self-government is going to generate a lot of discussion.

While there is broad consensus about the principles which underlie the need to give natives more control over their own lives, there are still many unanswered questions about how the concept of self-government will be put into practice.

The government of Ontario has been hailed for its efforts to negotiate land claim and resources issues with the province's native population.

But there are also deep divisions about the negotiation process and the direction the government has taken in granting rights and powers to the natives.

One of the most potentially explosive issues is the possibility of granting natives exclusive control over some of the province's natural resources such as fishing, mining and timber operations.

On the one hand, native groups say they need control of resource industries to provide an economic base for development of their communities.

Some non-native users, on the other hand, are concerned that the government is planning to hand the province's resources over to a minority of the population on the basis of race.

In the past couple of months, the issue of Ontario's fish stocks have come to the forefront of the debate.

The focus of the debate is a recommendation that control of all of Ontario's fish stocks, which are currently public property, be turned over to native control.

The recommendation came from a draft report prepared by the Native People's Circle on Environment and Development. The report was presented to a provincial committee, called the Ontario Round Table on Environment and Economy, which is developing a sustainable development strategy for Ontario.

Public ownership harmful

In the report, the Native People's Circle acknowledges that, under Canadian law, the fishery is common trust for the benefit of all but "the common ownership has led to depletion of fish stocks in Ontario and contamination of waterways.

"For the public good, the Native Circle believes this resource cannot continue to be common property." The report also says that Canadian courts have affirmed that, after conservation, the right of aboriginal people to the fishery resource for food, cultural and ceremonial purposes has priority over all other uses.

The report recommends that:

- the government of Ontario recognize the inherent right of Aboriginal people to the fishery resource;
- the government of Ontario enter into a co-management agreement with Aboriginal people, as a transitional stage in granting them full management of the provincial fish stocks, in light of conservation, wise management and continued access to all users;

• Aboriginal people be first in line for access to the commercial fishery; and

• Aboriginal communities be given financial assistance to develop aquaculture, fish hatcheries, fish stocking operations etc.

Essentially, the Native Circle recommendation, if accepted, would turn control over every fish in every lake in Ontario over to native population.

Predictably, the recommendation has been strongly criticized by representatives of Ontario's sport and commercial fishing industry.

Soon after the report was released, the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (OFAH) issued a statement expressing shock at the recommendation.

"Native people's demands go much too far," said OFAH executive vice-president Rick Morgan. "They want more than equality - they want control."

OFAH spokesman Matt Murphy told The Times that the Native Circle's report can not be dismissed as being too extreme for serious consideration by the government.

The committee which drafted the recommendation includes as a member Mark Krasnick, the top Native Affairs civil servant in the Ontario government. The chairman of the Native Circle is Louis "Smokey" Bruyere, a native consultant who has worked for the federal government.

Murphy says that because representatives from both levels of government signed the report which contained the recommendation to put control of the fish stocks in native hands, that is an indication the recommendation may be accepted.

Murphy, like other critics of the recommendation, stresses that OFAH's reaction is not racially-motivated, but is based on the question of conferring special rights on a small portion of the population.

"It's a resource issue," he says. "To give one per cent of the population control of one of our most valuable resources goes against the democratic grain."

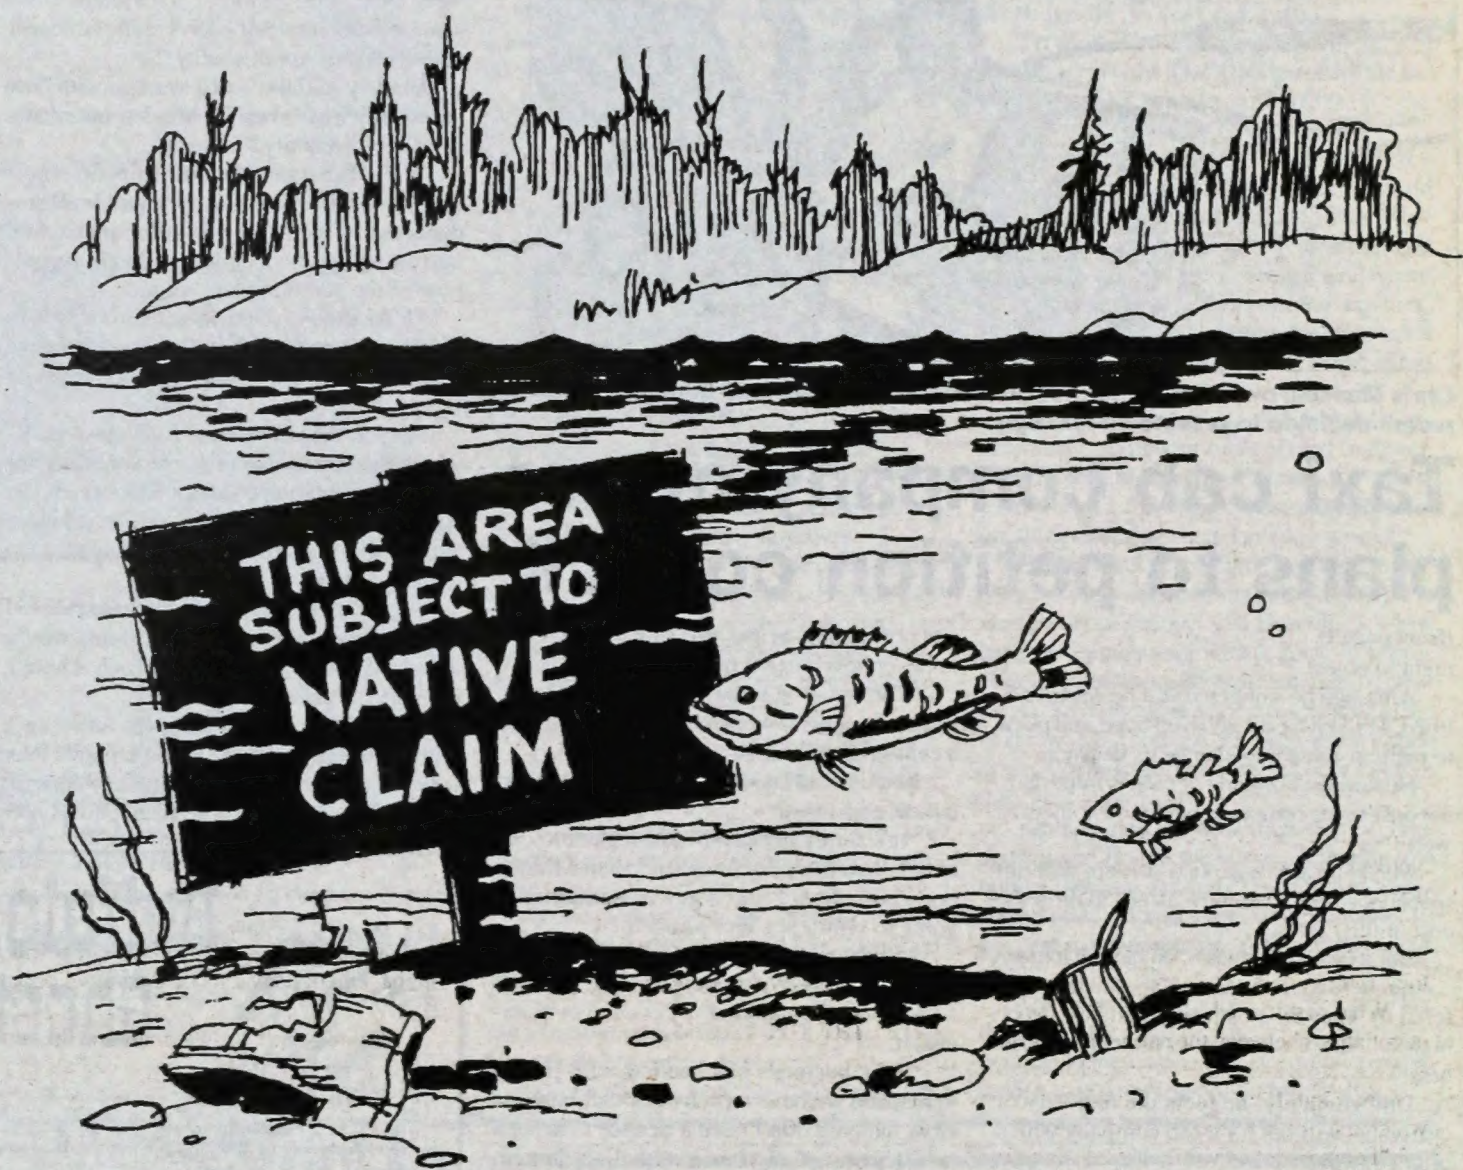

Murphy also takes issue with the Native's Circle claim that public ownership of the fishery has not worked.

"The statement that public ownership is not in the best interest of the fish stocks is entirely incorrect," he says. "Ontario does indeed have one of the best fisheries in the world. It's because of management practices that some species are starting to come back."

Natives do not have a monopoly of sound fish management practices any more than non-natives have a monopoly on poor resource management, he said.

As an example, Murphy points to the one million pounds of walleye harvested by natives from the Thames River. Although the natives said the size of the harvest would not have an adverse effect on the fish population, there has been a decrease in the walleye population in Lake Erie.

"It's a resource issue," says Matt Murphy. "To give one per cent of the population control of one of our most valuable resources goes against the democratic grain."

"We all have to be policed by science," says Murphy, "and science knows no race."

While agreeing that natives should fully participate in resource management, Murphy says giving them full control of the fishery is dangerous and will create a racist backlash in the industry.

Part of the NDP agenda

Another outspoken critic of the Native Circle's recommendation is Phil Morlock, the director of Shimano Sport Fishery Initiative. Shimano is one of the largest manufacturers of fishing tackle in Canada.

Morlock says the recommendations contained in the Native Circle report reflect the Ontario government's "fast track" approach to dealing with native issues.

"We have not seen any document from a native group asking for control, before the NDP became the government," he says. "The agenda is an NDP agenda and the natives are echoing the government's plan."

Although the federal government would have to be involved in any transfer of Crown land and resources from Ontario to the native population, Morlock says the federal government would probably go ahead with a recommendation from the province.

"I don't see any scenario where the federal government would refuse to do that," he says. "(Constitutional Affairs Minister) Joe Clark says Ontario is a model in its dealings with the natives."

Native use of fishery takes priority

Morlock says there will be dire consequences to Ontario's economy if the government hands substantial control of the province's natural resources to native control.

He said the leading financial institutions in North America, which are already nervous because of the recession, will limit the lines of credit to Ontario's resource based industries like tourism and timber companies.

"The government of Ontario is losing control of its greatest economic asset," he said.

On the practical side of the issue, Morlock doesn't see how the native population can effectively manage the province's fishery resource when there are 60 different native groups in Ontario. "I don't see a cohesive management strategy," he says. "Native groups are as diverse as municipalities."

And like the OFAH, Morlock disputes the Native Circle's claim that public ownership of the province's fishery has caused the depletion of fish stocks and the contamination of waterways.

If Ontario's fish stocks need help, Morlock says it is because the government has failed to allocate sufficient financial resources to management efforts, not because of abusive practices by sport and commercial users.

"The government of Ontario has underfunded fishery programs for years, and they are responsible for any decline," he says. "The Native Circle is saying, 'give us control, give us a lot of money and we will improve the fishery.'"

"Well so would the existing managers if they were given the money."

What disturbs Morlock most is fact that negotiations between the natives and the government are taking place behind closed doors with no input from any other interest groups which may be affected by the decision.

"I do not see any willingness on the part of the Round Table or the cabinet to allow public involvement," he says. "What are they hiding? It calls into question the NDP's commitment to honest, open government."

On the other side of the issue is Louis "Smokey" Bruyere, the chairman of the Native Circle and one of the authors of the recommendation that natives be given control of the fish population.

In an interview with The Times, Bruyere said people should consider the recommendation for what it is - a point from which to start negotiations.

"It means exactly what it said, that every fish should be turned over to the aboriginals," he said. "When you start negotiations you start from the top."

Addressing the concerns voiced by people like Morlock and Murphy, Bruyere says it should be understood that the Native Circle's recommendation includes access to the fish stocks by all users.

up to the federal and provincial governments to represent the concerns of all citizens.

"The government is supposed to be protecting third party interests," he said. "The way it is now, a lot of people don't trust the Rae government and don't see it as representing their concerns."

Bruyere said he would be willing to sit down for face-to-face talks with representatives of the sport and commercial fishing industries. He says the important thing is for the government and citizens of Ontario to understand and accept the values behind the Native

Supreme Court of Canada in the Sparrow case, which affirmed that native use of the fishery resource has priority over all other uses except conservation.

"In reflecting the Sparrow decision in its policies and regulations, the Ontario government indicates that Ontario and aboriginal governments will eventually share the stewardship of several territories," said Wildman. "These would be non-treaty lands where aboriginal people have retained the right to harvest food."

Wildman said in some areas the First Nations would exercise powers of government in several matters of conservation and resource management, in other jurisdictions they would share these powers with other levels of government and in other areas there would be exclusive jurisdiction for Ontario.

Not in the cards

Speaking specifically about the Native Circle report and the recommendation to hand over control of fish stocks to Aboriginal populations, Wildman said the response to the report is an indication of the misunderstanding and differences which surround the issue.

"I want to say clearly now that, despite reports to the contrary, Ontario is not prepared to turn over complete management, ownership or control of Ontario's fish or game to aboriginal people," he said. "It's not in the cards."

Wildman also stressed that the draft report from the Native Circle is not a government document and is not, at this point, even a recommendation to the government.

The Native Circle report, along with the reports of other task forces, will be taken into account by the Round Table when it presents its report to the government in the spring.

As a member of the Round Table, Wildman said he will respond to recommendations at the appropriate time.

In the meantime, groups like the OFAH are mounting a public relations counter-attack against the government's approach to land-use negotiations with natives.

People on both sides of the issue, including Morlock and Bruyere, agree that the question of increased native involvement in the fishery resource will become a test case which will affect future negotiations on timber and mining rights.

"Some people want to maintain the status quo where non-natives control everything and natives have no say," says Native Circle Chairman Smokey Bruyere. "The status quo is not acceptable."

He also points out that the report recommends a transitional co-management agreement with the province before full control is assumed by natives.

"Aboriginals don't have the expertise and won't have the expertise in the near future to do something like this," he says. "We want to control the stocks but ensure everyone has access including sport and commercial fishing. If it's going to be done, it has to be done properly through negotiated co-management."

And Bruyere recognizes that the recommendation is so extreme it will probably never become government policy.

Too far off the wall

"I don't think you'll see it in the final document, it's too far off the wall," he said. "But we've got to start someplace."

In dealing with the issue of how Ontario's diverse native population could assume management of the fish stocks, Bruyere says he suggests that each band could assume control in their own territory, working in cooperation with the federal and provincial governments.

Most of the criticism levelled at the Native Circle's recommendation focuses on the lack of input from other, non-native interest groups. Bruyere says he would assume that it would be Circle report and then start talking about specific policies.

One thing the Native Circle report accomplished was to get people in the province talking about native issues.

"This sure did it. We got good responses from more than 100 different people," said Bruyere. "Some were quite racist, from both native and non-native, and there also were good, positive responses from both groups."

The controversy which surrounds the report is partly because some people are reluctant to accept an increased role in resource management decisions by the native population.

"Some people want to maintain the status quo where non-natives control everything and natives have no say," says Bruyere. "The status quo is not acceptable."

The biggest question in the issue of native control of resources is how the Ontario government will respond to recommendations coming from the Native Circle's report to the Round Table.

In a speech to the Canadian Environmental Law Association in Toronto earlier this year, natural resources minister Bud Wildman set out the government's position.

He made reference to the decision by the

Striking a balance

The meeting Friday evening which brought together representatives of elected municipal councils and members of the county's tax coalition organization is another positive step toward opening the process of local government.

The evening proved for the most part that the two parties can indeed provide valuable information and opinions to serve the needs of each representative group. And perhaps more importantly, it proved that this exchange can take place in a reasoned fashion that respects the position of all participants.

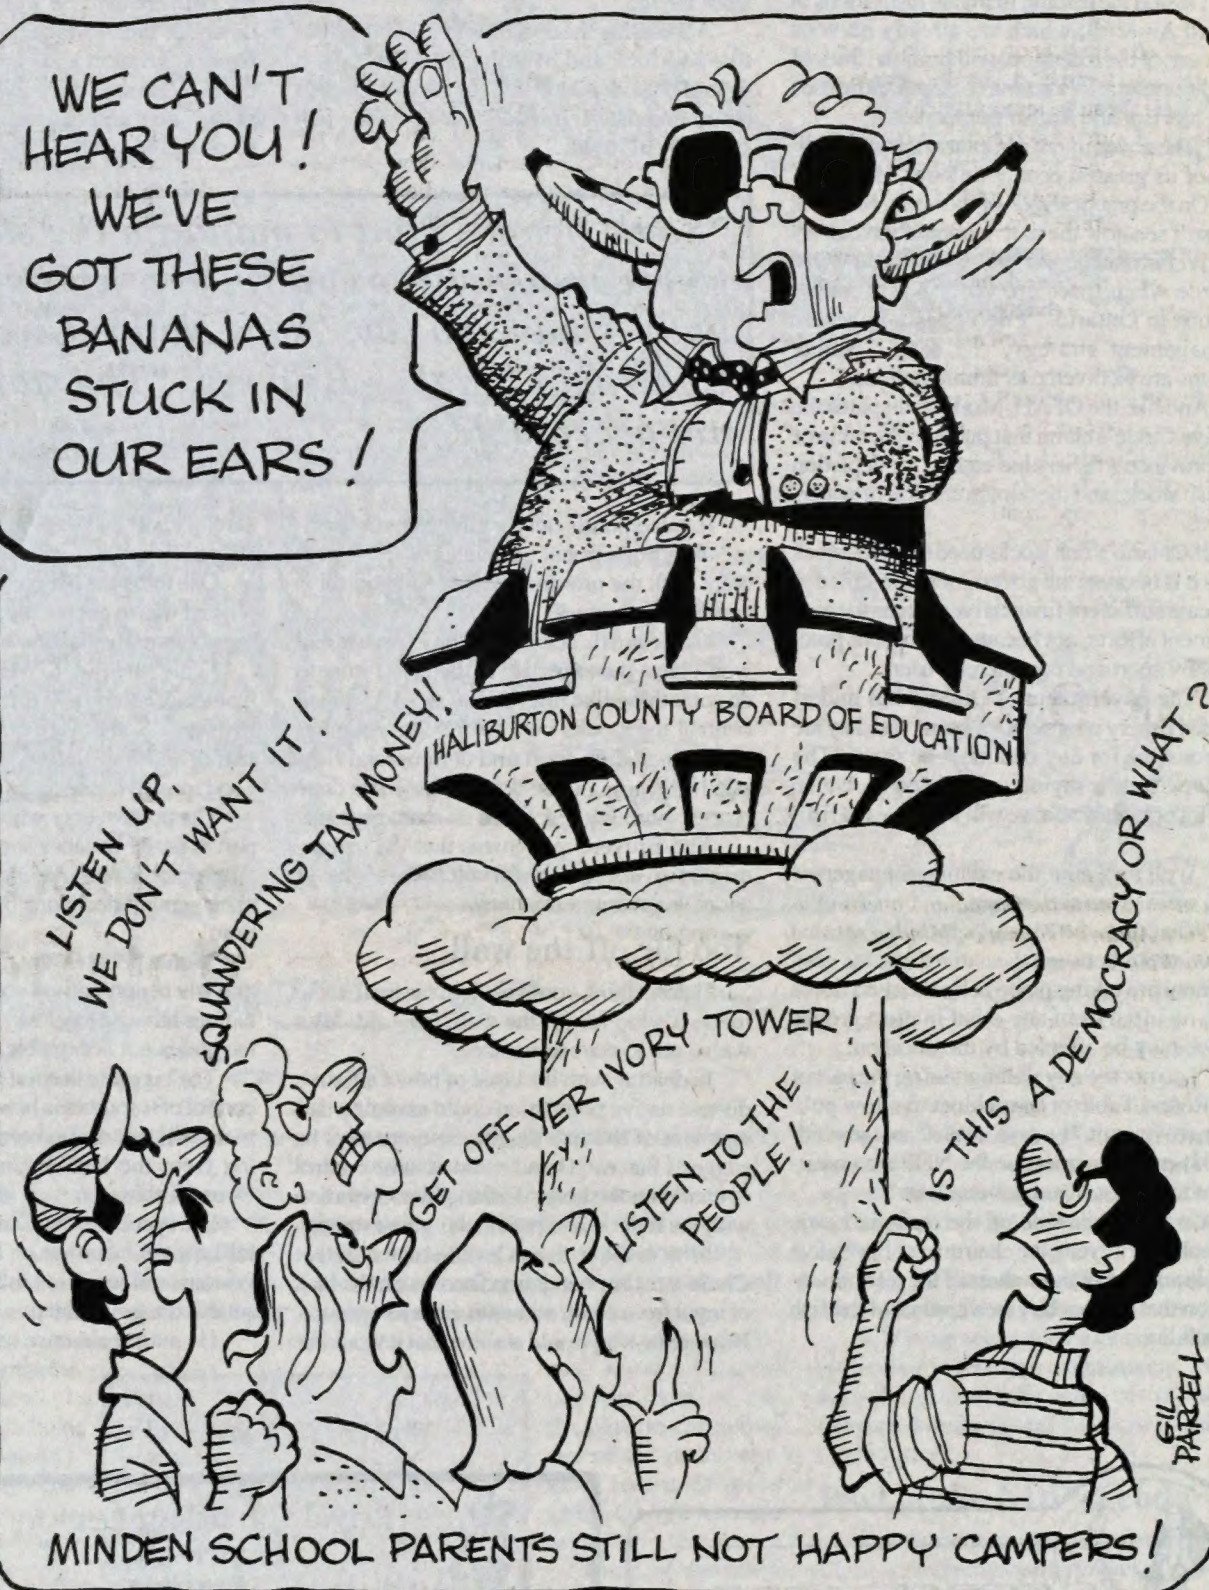

This sort of meeting can only help to build bridges of understanding and appreciation for the concerns held by each group.

It often seems that the only time politicians listen is during the two month period when hopeful candidates court voters. Likewise, the general public only seems to be keenly interested in issues affecting their municipality during the same campaign period. If nothing else, the formation of the tax coalition has extended that attention span, which can only bode well for the management of the county's municipalities.

As encouraging as this new approach is, it is worth keeping in mind that while the public may wish to exert maximum influence over the elected officials, they have in fact been chosen to make decisions for the benefit of the entire community. Those decisions may not always reflect the narrow vision of tax reduction, for example, but can represent actions based on long-term benefits, benefits that may not yield immediate returns. Of course, it is incumbent upon the elected officials to inform and educate, as well as decide. And for those who stride forward under the single banner of tax reduction, there must be a realization that our elected officials have the responsibility to think and plan with the long, as well as short term in mind.

Finding a balance between these two, often competing stances, will be the ongoing challenge facing politicians and the public.

Criminal's defence was a tired excuse

Stop the presses! Bulletin! Bulletin! Tell Mansbridge to slick down what's left of his forelock and get ready for a brand new lead story! A Calgary court decision has slam-shifted Canadian criminal law right out of the twentieth century at warp speed and straight into the Twilight Zone.

Here's the deal: A Calgary lawyer, charged with defrauding the province of Alberta to the tune of $900,000, was convicted and sentenced to jail. (Two years, suspended — the man was a lawyer, after all. Only little people actually go to jail.)

But the lawyer even avoided the suspended sentence by pleading — are you ready? —

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome.

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

His defence was that a viral infection attacked his mind and forced him to steal the money. "This illness was the cause of this crime," argued his attorney. "This kind of crime gave him a thrill...a temporary relief from the ravages of the disease."

Oh, I get it. The man's not a thief — he was just...overtired. But here's the beautiful part of the whole story (from a lawyer or a crook's point of view). Chronic Fatigue Syndrome is medically undetectable. There is no known diagnostic test or cure for it.

That makes it even better than the Twinkie Defense. Remember that? Back in 1979, a homophobic whacko by the name of Dan White murdered the mayor and the supervisor of the city of San Francisco. At White's trial, his lawyer argued that White was not responsible for his actions because he had overindulged in junk foods — specifically Twinkies — before the shooting. In other words, he'd committed the murders while out of control on a Sugar High.

A couple of years ago there was a court case in Florida (more on page 7)

Parents can't ignore school issue

Editor:

I recently attended a meeting which can only be described as a public relations attempt to placate upset residents of Minden and the surrounding area. We were informed, after the fact, of a decision by the Haliburton County Board of Education to remove Grade 7 and 8 students from Minden and the surrounding area and bus them to a proposed, new-concept Junior High School to be built in Haliburton.

The School Board and elected trustees from each township came to this far-reaching decision without a request for public input. How can they claim to have an innate ability to know all interested views and perspectives without consulting the people they supposedly represent?

This is not a matter of little importance, it is a fundamental change in the concept of our local school system and brings with it the centralizing of another two grades as well as the frustration of our children having to endure an extended two years of extra busing. I want informed representation on my behalf.

Perhaps you, the members of the School Board, in your enlightened, hallowed halls of academia, felt it more expedient and less threatening to your plans to push through your intentions; easier to sway a few trustees than a whole community. Please do not forget that you represent the taxpayer in your positions.

One of the School Board designers of this plan informed me that the Minden area has the largest elementary school population in the county and that money is the bottom line on the Board's decision. So why not build a Junior High in Minden where the population is located, bus the smaller school population for Grades 7, 8 and 9 from Haliburton and split the busing inconvenience for both communities? I question the cost analysis as prepared by your Board based on lack of any surveys or data to back the figures. Why was the potential increase of busing costs not included in your analysis?

Bryan Kernohan, a local engineer, has completed a preliminary cost analysis backed by demographics, busing patterns and distances using cost guidelines supplied by your own Board.

He has figures which show it's cheaper to build in Minden by nearly $2,000,000. In light of the lack of incoming information it seems to me that the School Board's decision is based more on a desire to keep administrative functions centralized and close to the Board member's present workplace, namely the town of Haliburton.

I cannot understand why any trustee whose constituency is required to be bused further, would vote yes or abstain from voting at all. It seems to me that voting for this plan is to:

- a) Vote yes to close Grade 7 and 8 in Minden, thus reducing the opportunities for education in this town.
- b) Vote yes to busing further distances 2 years sooner than necessary.

- c) Vote yes to increased busing costs.
- d) Vote yes to a Junior High School in the town of Haliburton and the associated job spinoffs rather than the town of Minden.

And where is the council of Minden's voice? What opportunities are being let go without a whimper? A community's life blood is its young people. If you were looking for a town to settle your family into would you move to one which offered educational continuity from Kindergarten to Grade 13 or Kindergarten to Grade 6 and then seven years of busing to gain a High School education for your children?

Even a cottage council should see that the long-term tax base is eroded by this decision. Perhaps there would be administrative gain in changing all outlining community schools into bus depots and busing solely to Haliburton! I'm sure a case could be made for this.

To not speak out would be letting my children down.

Reader shares ideas on violence of males

Editor's note: The following is a copy of a submission to the Canadian Panel on Violence Against Women by Minden resident No Wiebe.

In my previous paper, entitled: "Women are to Blame for Everything that's Wrong on the Face of the Earth", submitted to the Creative Peacemaking Contest sponsored by the world Federalists of Canada and St. Lawrence College, Kingston, Ontario, November 9 and 10, 1985, I explained my premise as follows: men are already the most brilliant, creative, creatures on the planet. The world is filled with their originality and inventions. The male of the species is an incredibly intelligent, resourceful, creature.

So I postulate: if the product, i.e., the male, is very nearly perfect, and yet problems still exist, then the next step is to look at the producer of that product, i.e., the female.

Assuming for the moment that attitudes are the building blocks of behaviour, and that the beginnings of attitudes are determined by women, we can come to this conclusion: women are to blame for everything that's wrong on the face of the earth.

If women neglect the existence of others and insist on putting the self first, then the lives of the sexes will be filled with distortion and unbalanced opinions.

Centering on the small needs of the individual produces a product incapable of sharing with others. These shortcomings are transferred back and forth between the sexes and the result is the current situation between men and women. If humanity is to be saved then women have to realize the onus is theirs. Women must awaken with visionary eyes to see where mankind is headed: they need to accept this responsibility with awareness. If women change, men will change too. Women are answerable for the attitudes they bring to bear on the lives they directly influence.

If we as women really care about men, then we must realize that we are responsible for the expressions of despair that men show.

No Wiebe
Woman and Realist.

School board must be notified of discontent

Editor:

I am writing in regard to the article "Board Will Consider New School Option". I think people need to be reminded that even though the School Board has appeared to look at the accommodation issue again does not mean that they have any intention of making changes.

It is great that Bryan Kernohan and Doug Campbell took on the challenge of coming up with an alternative option which could open doors to even more options being discussed, but we should not let it rest at that.

If you have an opinion or some constructive ideas, get your pen out and write it down and send it to your School Board or trustees.

Keep the show of discontent with their choice of options in the limelight. If we sit complacently by thinking that because the issue has been re-opened the School Board will make an unprecedented turn around and follow the people's wishes, we may be fooled.

I am urging you not to let this issue die — call or write your trustees or School Board and voice your opinion. Do not let the hard work that Bryan and Doug have started be for naught.

These are your children, your tax dollars, your town and county that will be deeply affected by their decisions. Just look at Kinmount and Norland...

Yours truly,
Georgina Kernohan

Did a jilted Capone instigate the massacre?

where a lawyer argued that his client — an adolescent who'd dusted his parents with the family .357 — was not a cold-blooded killer. He was just an innocent victim of too much TV violence. Endless viewing of programs such as Miami Vice and Starsky and Hutch, claimed the lawyer, had convinced the gormless tadpole that the best way to deal with pressing problems was to squint down a gun barrel and blow them away.

Ah, the Boob Tube solution, the Twinkie Defense, the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome — I can see unlimited possibilities for criminal jurisprudence here.

And not just with cases of misunderstood rapists, underprivileged psychopaths and misfortune-bedogged serial killers currently languishing within the system. No, clearly the time has come to revise the history books and expunge the unjust blots beside the names of the Historically Misunderstood.

I look forward with relish to a treatise called the Capone Conundrum, in which a psychologist explains the Valentine's Day Massacre was merely Al's way of "acting out" his frustration at not receiving a single Valentine card that year.

No doubt some academic is toiling away at this very moment over a manuscript which examines Jessie James' unfortunate Freudian fixation on trains.

"Phallocentrism In Late 19th Century Rural Kansas" it might be called.

What other innovative defense stratagems can we expect? The Hitler Hangup perhaps, in which it is made clear that Adolf was no despot — merely the victim of tight underwear.

The Genghis Gambit, whereby historians discover that the Great Khan never meant to hurt a fly. His conquests were merely the attention-getting device if an inveterate bed-wetter.

As for me, I'm rather bored. Think I'll stroll down to the Canadian Tire, put my boot through the glass counter of the gun display, grab a Winchester pump, then amble over to the CIBC and stick 'em up.

Maybe I'll do a spot of rape and pillage over at the milk store too.

Am I worried about getting caught? Hell, I expect to. Already got my defense strategy worked out.

I'm gonna tell the judge the Devil made me do it.

Gallery collection offers art for all tastes

by Susan Grober

The current exhibit at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery has special meaning for Minden, as selections from its permanent collection of art are on display until the end of this week. The works of 15 artists have been chosen for the exhibit — from paintings to sketches to sculptures, the artwork on display provides an interesting and diverse mix.

"I think for a little gallery, it's quite a good collection of art — it's really quite impressive," says acting gallery manager Irene Lubowitz, who is on-hand at the gallery to share her extensive research into the lives of many of the artists on display.

The exhibit includes 27 paintings, both in oil and watercolour, by Andre Lapine, the artist whose work provided the inspiration for Minden to open its own public art gallery.

Born in Shujen in the Russian province of Riga in 1868, the aspiring artist travelled Europe with his mentor, Stanislaus Rose, a professor at the Imperial Academy of Petrograd. Lapine settled in Paris during the Impressionist era, and later married Columbienna Gertruda Gerguivia, a Dutch woman he met while studying in the Netherlands.

The couple emigrated to Canada in 1907, and settled in Toronto where Lapine established himself in the artistic community.

In 1915, Lapine was honoured by an appointment to the Association of Royal Canadian Artists.

Lapine's wife developed health problems during her later years, so the couple came to this area in the 1930s. They stayed on a South Lake Road farm owned by William Hamilton and his wife, who cared for Gertruda.

The Hamilton farm and way of life are depicted in many of the paintings currently on display at the gallery.

In 1941, at the age of 72, Gertruda died at the Hamilton home.

Soon after, Lapine became a regular visitor at the Minden home of Frank Welch, who acquired a significant collection of the artist's works during their long association.

When Welch died in the mid 1970s, he left the collection of Lapine paintings to the village of Minden with the condition that a permanent home be found to display the artwork. If such a home wasn't found within five years, Welch's will stipulated the paintings would go to Haliburton village.

Needless to say, Minden got its gallery, thanks to the hard work of Dr. Agnes Jamieson and members of the committee she formed to find a home for the collection.

Another artist featured is George Pratt, the Minden-born sculptor who in 1982 was commissioned to do the 400 pound granite statue of Terry Fox which stands in front of the Port Coquitlam B.C. library.

From 1970 to 1975, Pratt studied sculpture with E.B. Cox in Toronto, and then studied tundra life at Fort Churchill, Manitoba from 1957 to 1959.

The son of Robert and Edna Pratt, the 52-year-old now lives in Vancouver, and has established a gallery in his home where collectors from all over have purchased more than 500 stone carvings of various sizes. Pratt has also been teaching British Columbia Indian carvers to carve in stone under the sponsorship of the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs.

The Pratt sculptures in the Minden collection are a set of two bears, done in limestone from Texas, and two seagulls, sculpted in alabaster from Italy.

Also on display is one of the gallery's recent acquisitions, a sketch of swans by local wildlife artist David Alexander Risk.

Not all of the artists included have local roots. On exhibit is David Ivan McLeod's painting, Mouth of the Sydenham River.

An active member of the Ontario Art Club of Toronto, as well as the Arts and Letters Club of Toronto and Montreal, McLeod painted and sketched with many Montreal and Toronto landscape artists, including A.Y. Jackson, Fred S. Haines, J.W. Beatty, Manly MacDonald, R.W. Pilot, Thomas Garside, Andre Lapine and with several U.S. artists.

Born in Owen Sound in 1886, McLeod actually worked in journalism and in the business world after graduating from Queen's University in Kingston in 1908.

A successful businessman, he opened his own firm of Investment Bankers of (more on page 13)

This nude, thought to be of Andre Lapine's wife, Gertruda, is done in watercolour.

Men's Recreational
Hockey Play-offs continue tonight

Five teams still alive in play-offs

Five teams remain in contention as the Men's Recreational Hockey League heads into the final night of its round robin play-offs. Hartwick Construction continues to lead the pack after managing a 3-3 tie against Kountry Double D Catering, the last place team in the play-off standings. The tie gave Hartwick one more point, boosting their total to six points.

Last week's fourth and fifth place teams, The Times and Stamp Fuels both claimed victories to keep their play-off hopes alive. Stamps blanked Westside Jug City 6-0 to move into second place in the standings while The Times edged Home Hardware 3-2 to claim a third place tie with Westside with four points each. The loss by Home Hardware left the team with three points, but still gives them a potential second place tie finish with Sid Stamp Fuels.

Even Hartwick Construction is not assured to a play-off berth. A loss by them to Westside could put the Hartwick squad in a three way tie for the second play-off spot with Westside and Times (if those two teams win their games). If a tie developed, the number of goals scored during the round robin series would be used to determine the winner. A win, or even a tie in tonight's action would assure Hartwick of a play-off spot. So the games this evening should have a special edge to them as the teams jockey for the top two spots.

In the opening game of last week's action all the goal scoring took place in the first period, with Craig Crowe striking the first blow with an unassisted marker for The Times. Daryl Ward responded for Home Hardware with the assist going to Dean Hewitt. The Times claimed the lead again on an unassisted goal by Ivan Ingram and then a go-ahead marker off the stick of Doug Allison. The assists on that goal went to Derek Moore and Ivan Ingram. Home rallied for one more goal, with Gary Harrison picking up the point. Assists went to Dave Rogers and Carey Gilligan.

Terry Crowe was in net for Home while Andrew Burk worked the net for The Times.

Jochamin Matyssek scored two goals to lead Sid Stamp Fuels to their 6-0 romp over Westside Jug City. Other markers went to Ted Vasey, unassisted, Doug Schell, Bart Hillhorst, and Larry Sawyer. Assists were credited to Kim Colliss with a pair, and singles from Schell, Hillhorst, Dave Pettes, Andy Campbell and Vasey.

Kevin Smith earned the shut-out for Stamps while Ron Telford was in net for Westside.

Kountry Double D Catering scored their three goals in the opening period while Hartwick Construction

All eyes are on the puck as it seems to hang suspended in front of Home Hardware goalie Terry Crowe. notched theirs in the final frame as the teams emerged with a 3-3 tie in the last game of the evening. Scoring for Double D were Scott Hamilton with a pair, one unassisted, and Tom Haley. Assists went to Doug Ray with two, Haley and Rick Beeney.

The Hartwick marksmen included Sid Mackeigan, Jeff Stamp and Kevin Hamilton. Stamp picked up a pair of assists.

Duane Lennie was the Double D netminder while Rob Crowe worked the other end of the ice.

The round robin play-offs conclude this evening with the top two teams advancing to a best-of-three, final show down to determine the year's champion team. The action starts at 8 p.m. with Hartwick and Westside squaring off. Double D and Times are next at 9 p.m., while Home and Stamp round it out at 10 p.m. Admission to the games is free.

Local team places tenth

Back from the challenge of Harricana

It may not have been Mount Everest, but for three men from Minden, the experience of participating in, and completing, the gruelling Harricana snowmobile race carries with it the same elation and sense of accomplishment.

For Steve Brand, Ross Lennox, Bill Moffatt and mechanic Dereck Marchand the mere fact the team completed the ten day, 3000 kilometre race is reason enough for satisfaction. "We just wanted to complete the course, to prove we could do it. After all, completing the Harricana puts us among only several hundred individuals in this world who have met the challenge offered by the race," Brand said.

In fact, the trio of racers did more than "just finish". They placed tenth out of 23 teams which started the course in Ottawa February 23. Only 19 teams came in under their own steam in Quebec City.

The Harricana is an endurance competition in which teams of three drivers race their snowmobiles against the clock over a ten day span. Its more than a race against time, however. The course takes the participants over some of the roughest territory central Quebec can offer. The men and machines struggled through slush covered lakes, fresh powder snow that reached depths of 12 feet, long stretches of isolated trails where the drivers had to trust their ability and wits to navigate to lead them to the next check point. Along the way the participants had to deal with sub-zero temperatures and snow that often obliterated the trail.

The team was sponsored by Prentice-Berry Limited of Minden and Royal Homes. A large number of additional sponsors provided gear and supplies for the team, the only Canadian entry from outside Quebec.

The Harricana organizers are the same individuals responsible for the Paris to Dakar (now Cape Town) car and motorcycle rally. The premise is to pit driver and machines against a challenging trail in a hostile environment. Most of the entries come from Quebec, with northern Native Indian and Inuit communities sponsoring teams. However, a number of European teams also take part, employing extensive preparation and support teams.

To help increase exposure for the race in other parts of Canada, the organizers waived the $45,000 entry fee for the Prentice-Berry/Royal Home team. "It was a gesture of goodwill and we were pleased to have it offered to us," Brand said. While the team faced better financed teams from other communities and Europe, they still managed to accomplish their goal of completing the circuit.

Asked what was the toughest part of the competition, all members of the team agreed it was the six day scramble they endured to get ready for the event. When word came down that they would be included in the starting line-up, the team had less than a week to prepare their sleds, gather their equipment and make the preparations necessary to mount a credible entry.

Having leapt that hurdle, the three found themselves in line with other teams under the shadow of the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill for the start of the event February 23.

Each driver and machine had to complete each leg of the route for the score to be counted. In addition to the three Mach I XTC Ski-Doo snowmobiles the members were driving, they also had to tow a sled which carried extra gasoline, repair gear and emergency supplies to support the team for at least three days. The machines served the racers well, and while they realized the value of the contents of the sled, hauling it along became somewhat of an albatross. The snowmobile to which the sled was attached experienced an immediate and dramatic drop in manoeuvrability and gasoline consumption. Since most of the route was over ungroomed trails, the sled resulted in a steady drain on the gas, at one time bringing it down to a mere five miles to a gallon.

The Harricana generated its own special kind of excitement in the communities where it passed. Some had built a winter carnival like atmosphere around the arrival of the racers, feting them to gracious and enthusiastic welcomes. Lennox remembers in the community of Roberval, "It seemed everyone in the town was out to greet us." At another isolated Ojibwan community, the racers were treated to a sumptuous buffet that could rival any offered in Toronto.

The team members had unending praise for the efforts of the organizers. As they pointed out, it is a massive exercise in co-ordination to organize an event such as this covering thousands of miles and a myriad of details. From the personal needs of the racers to the formal, grand finale in Quebec City, the local team said the organizers had every detail covered.

In the end, it is the personal satisfaction of having completed the course which provides the reward for the three racers. "We went in on a shoe-string budget and went up against million dollar teams," Moffatt said. "We hadn't fooled ourselves into thinking we could take it all, but we did prove with stamina and endurance we could successfully meet the challenge of the Harricana." And that sounds a lot like something someone coming down off Mount Everest might say.

Snowmobilers pose danger to sidewalk pedestrians

by Susan Grober

Minden council hopes to curb the dangerous use of snowmobiles on the sidewalk outside the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home.

During its last meeting, council considered a letter from Funeral Director Gord Monk, who explained his frustration with snowmobilers traveling on the sidewalk in front of the Bobcaygeon Road business.

"The method in which the snowmobiles are driven, the speed and lack of care and concern by the operators poses a very serious threat to pedestrians as well as to the operators themselves," Monk wrote.

"My own driveway as well as several others have a considerable amount of traffic, and with the machines driving so close to buildings, and also obscured by snowbanks, I can assure you that eventually a serious accident will occur."

Although there are signs posted warning that snowmobiles are prohibited on the sidewalks at either side of the road, Monk said they are being ignored.

He also said the municipality has not been enforcing its bylaw. Because of this, Monk notified council that if any of his vehicles or staff becomes involved in an accident with a snowmobile driver on the sidewalks while using his driveway, he will direct any legal responsibility toward the municipality.

"Placing signs on posts without enforcing the bylaw does nothing to solve the problem," he said.

To alleviate the problem, Monk asked that the municipality:

-involve the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association and tell them to take more positive action if they wish the co-operation of the municipality;

-strictly enforce the bylaw and fine the offenders;

-enlist the full assistance of the OPP to curb the speeding of the machines through town; and

-take legal action when the public reports numbers on a machine.

"We have done our utmost to ask the individuals to please stay off the sidewalk and have tried to be diplomatic in our approach," said Monk.

Although about 15 per cent of the requests were acknowledged, he said the rest "have argued, hurled invective at my wife and my daughter and been nothing but absolute boors."

Even when the sidewalk area is barricaded with vehicles, some snowmobilers try to drive over the shrubs and damage Monk's property, he said.

During the meeting, Roads Superintendent Clayton Cameron told council he has discussed the matter with Monk, and feels he has come up with a possible solution.

Cameron suggested that holes be drilled into the sidewalk, and three sets of four-inch steel posts be placed in the concrete to prevent the snowmobilers from passing through.

The posts would have reflector tapes on them for safety, and be placed in the winter and then removed when the snow is gone, said Cameron.

Too many sports enthusiasts are ignoring this no snowmobiling sign posted at the sidewalk in front of the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home.

If Monk accepts this solution, he would then be responsible for the sidewalk, Cameron added. He also said if council approves the idea it would set a precedent, and the municipality would be obligated to provide the same for others.

Councillor Gerry Rome had concerns that the municipality would be liable for any snowmobile accidents which obstruction of the sidewalk could possibly cause.

Cameron said he discussed the matter with a lawyer, who said "it's totally up to the snowmobilers, because they're not supposed to be there."

To be safe, Rome asked that approval of the idea only be granted upon receipt of satisfactory written legal opinion.

Rome agreed with Monk that the use of sidewalks by many snowmobilers has created a dangerous situation.

"I'm surprised no one has been killed," he said. "It's a very serious problem. When those snowmobiles go through town they really get flying. They really have no respect for the sidewalks at all."

Cameron pointed out that when planned renovations to the Dominion Hotel are carried out, it will block a path often used by snowmobilers and could create more problems.

Minden's permanent collection features notable artists

McLeod, Young, Weir and Company in 1920.

Frederick Sproston Challener's Portrait of Agnes Jamieson is featured, along with his painting, Wilson Log Cabin, Irondale.

Born in Whetstone, England, Challener came to Canada with his parents in 1870 at the age of one, returned to London six years later, and came to Toronto in 1883.

A winner of many awards, Challener also did commercial work which included illustrations for Player's cigarettes.

His paintings hang in many public buildings, including the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto, and the Opera House in London. And he is represented at the Art Gallery of Ontario, as well as many other collections.

Among his many commissions, Challener painted murals for three passenger boats: the S.S. Toronto, S.S. Kingston, and S.S. Montreal.

Born in Toronto in 1881, Herbert Sidney Palmer (whose paintings Sheep and Hunting Scene are on display) studied under Challener and J.W. Beatty at the Central Ontario School of Art and Design.

He worked for a lithography firm and sang in the Mendelssohn Choir. Later, he became a full-time painter with his studio in the rear of his home on St. Clements Avenue in Toronto.

Palmer earned a reputation as a painter of cattle and sheep in rural Ontario, and had sketched in many parts of the province, including Haliburton County.

He first exhibited with the Ontario Society of Artists at the age of 23, and was elected a member in 1909. A year later, he was a founding member of the Arts and Letters Club in Toronto. In 1915, Palmer was elected as an Associate Royal Canadian Academician, and in 1919 he became vice-president and treasurer of the Ontario Society of Artists.

And, from 1926 to 1941, Palmer was curator of the Fine Art Department of the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

Gallery hours are Monday to Saturday, 10 to 4 p.m. The gallery is located on Bobcaygeon Road.

Police briefs

During the week of February 24 to March 1 officers of the Minden Detachment investigated numerous incidents, seven automobile accidents, with one person injured, and three snow vehicle accidents with no injuries.

Sharing The Highway

Section 127 (1) of the Highway Traffic Act states that "Every person in charge of a vehicle on a highway meeting another vehicle shall turn out to the right from the center of the roadway, allowing the other vehicle one half of the roadway free."

This is common sense as no one wants to be involved in a motor vehicle collision. However, there have been some near misses recently with snow plows.

Road service vehicles (snow plows) are exempt from this section while engaged in road service work (removal of snow).

Motorists can expect a snow plow to be travelling slightly left of center while removing snow. They are asked to move right accordingly to ensure no collisions and no near misses occur.

To help you fill out your income tax return

Extended hours

From February 24 to April 30, we offer an "after hours" phone service from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

You can also call T.I.P.S. Info-Tax, our automated phone service, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, for recorded information on selected topics.

No-calculation returns

To make things easier, we've designed two simpler tax returns that don't have any calculations.

These optional returns are great for people with straightforward tax situations. If you're under 65, you can use the "Short." If you're 65 or over, the "65 Plus" is for you. Whatever return you use, you should fill out only one.

Make sure your return is not delayed

Lots of people fill out their tax return with great care, only to miss details that can make all the difference. For example, if your address is incomplete or incorrect, your refund could be delayed or sent to the wrong place.

If you will be moving, write the new address on your return, or if you don't know it yet, please call us to let us know as soon as you can so we can update your file.

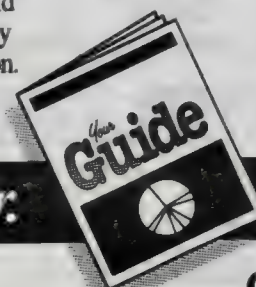

Another important detail is attaching all the slips and receipts that support your claims for credits and deductions. If any are missing, your return may get held up while we contact you for the information.

Respite care program gets $15,000 grant

The Ontario government has provided $15,000 to fund in-home respite care in Haliburton County.

MPP Dennis Drainville presented the cheque last Thursday to Marlene Edwards of the District Health Unit's Home Care Services. The presentation is the first instalment in the $174,000 annual subsidy from the province for in-home respite care.

In-home respite care is designed to give caregivers a rest from the daily responsibilities associated with caring for an elderly or disabled person. The service is available to families who reside in Haliburton County and who are willing to receive an in-home assessment.

"The residents of Haliburton County will be able to access much needed caregiver support services," Drainville said. "Families who are faced with the challenge of caring for frail elderly or disabled persons will now be able to receive in-home relief as well as highly qualified homemaker support."

The need for in-home respite care was identified in the Haliburton County Community Directional Plan released in April 1991.

In October 1991, Drainville announced a total of $2.7 million for improved health care in Haliburton County. The $15,000 presented for respite care on Thursday is the first of that money to be delivered.

The program will be delivered under a joint sponsorship with the Ministry of Health, the Board of Health of the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit and the Canadian Red Cross Society.

After Drainville presented the cheque, Edwards said there are well over 100 people in the county who are receiving care at home and many of these people should be in chronic care or long-term beds in institutions.

Edwards said the additional funding will allow an extension of the service, which now runs up to 60 hours a month.

Crime of the week

Mainly cash stolen in Haliburton crime spree

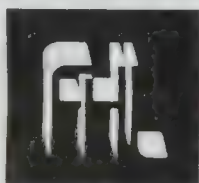

Between 28 Dec 91 and 02 Jan 92 at least 10 businesses have been broken into in the village of Haliburton. They include Harvest Restaurant, Cordells, Sears Catalogue Store, Perfect Prints, Intra Town & Country Travel, Ministry of Natural Resources Fire Base, Haliburton Legion, Haliburton Curling Club, Austin Fuels and Haliburton Construction. Attempts at entry were made at other businesses, including Northland Sales, Paulette's Gifts and Nancy's Flower Shop. Stolen during these Break and Enters were cash and some tools.

If you have any information about this or any other crime, call Lindsay Crimestoppers at 1-800-563-TIPS (8477). You will never be asked to reveal your identity or to testify in court. If your information leads to an arrest Lindsay Crimestoppers will pay up to $1,000 in cash.

Two new shows slated for gallery

The Agnes Jamieson Gallery held its fourth meeting on March 2nd; many programs were discussed, and a number of shows are planned in the forthcoming months to make your gallery an interesting and enjoyable place to visit.

Selections of our permanent collection (donated to the municipality by area residents) are now on display until March 14.

Most paintings are of Haliburton pastoral scenes. Do come in and have a look around.

March 19, 1992 will bring two interesting displays:

First, our annual spring members show will display the works of many of our talented local area artists and craftspeople.

The show will include oil, acrylic, watercolor paintings, wood carving, stained glass, knitting, crochet, etc... Come on in and see the vast array of talent in our county!!!

Every person viewing these exhibits will be given an opportunity to cast a vote for their favourite work of art on display. The results will be tabulated and the winner will be presented with the people's choice award between 2 and 4 p.m. on Saturday, April 11, 1992.

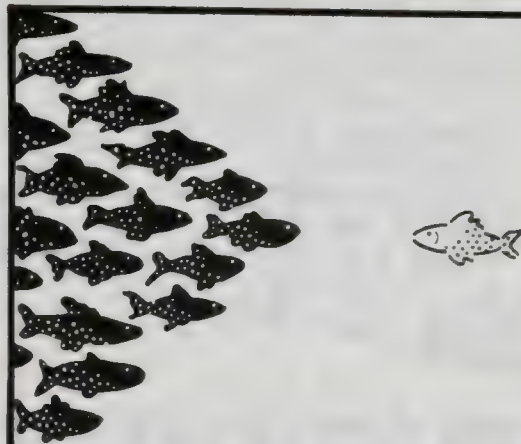

The second display, art from the Curve lake Native

Reserve, features exhibits from many exceptional Indian craftspeople, and their contribution to this show will be well worth enjoying.

Support your Gallery.

Hours: 10-4 p.m. Monday to Saturday.

The Agnes Jamieson Gallery is located on the Bobcaygeon Road, north in Minden adjacent to the Bowron Log Home, in the same building as the library.

Former Mindenite earns 'Gulf' medal

A former Minden resident has been presented with the Canadian Forces "Gulf and Kuwait" medal.

Master Seaman Dave Dankiw received the medal in recognition of his service aboard Her Majesty's Canadian Ship Huron during the Gulf crisis.

Master Seaman Dankiw was presented with the medal by Rear-Admiral Cairns, commander of Canadian Maritime Forces in the Pacific region.

The medal was awarded to all Canadian Forces personnel who served in the Persian Gulf.

Master Seaman Dankiw has been a sailor for almost 12 years and is presently serving aboard Her Majesty's Canadian Ship Annapolis, based in Victoria, BC.

His father, Fred Dankiw, still resides in the Minden area.

Program urges snowmobilers to stay safe by driving sober

Twenty seven Ontarians have lost their lives so far this winter in snowmobile-related accidents, exceeding the number of fatalities for the entire 1990-91 season, when 25 people died.

This increase has convinced sponsors of the province-wide snowmobile safety campaign, "Ride Safe, Ride Sober", to deliver stronger messages through a series of new TV commercials.

"A lot is at stake and lives are being lost," says Peter North, Ontario Minister of Tourism and Recreation.

"It's not just the drivers who are being hurt or killed. The accidents can involve innocent bystanders. These are tragedies that devastate families and communities."

The Ministry of Tourism and Recreation joined with five other Ontario ministries this year to launch the "Ride Safe, Ride Sober" campaign in conjunction with snowmobile manufacturers Yamaha Motors Canada Ltd., Bombardier Inc. and Arctic Cat.

Other sponsors are the Royal Life Saving Society Canada, the Federation of Ontario Cottagers Association Inc. and SportSmart

Canada.

Three new commercials were filmed last week near Barrie. Yamaha provided one of its top-selling snowmobiles for the production.

The Royal Life Saving Society Canada is funding the public service announcements.

The first spot is scheduled for broadcast in March and two more are planned for next year.

"We're really pleased with the support the campaign is receiving all across Ontario," says Mr. North.

"But we have to do more to make our message hit home with people who are mixing booze and snowmobiling. They think accidents can never happen to them."

"Many people don't realize that under the Criminal Code, if you're convicted of driving your snowmobile while impaired by alcohol or drugs, or if you refuse a breathalyzer test, you can be charged with a criminal offence," says Ed Bean, Director of Public Education for the Royal Life Saving Society of Canada.

"It's the same as with automobiles on the road. You'll have a criminal record and you could lose your licence."

Statistics show that most snowmobile accidents occur within a 15 kilometer radius of the victim's home.

And most victims are males from ages 18 to 34. Campaign sponsors are eager to reach that group.

In the script for one of the spots the camera focuses on a drowning snowmobiler.

Then a voiceover says, "They don't know it yet but John's snowmobile buddies are throwing him a surprise party next week."

The next shot shows a funeral procession.

"We hope these spots will make snowmobilers stop and think twice," says Mr. North.

"Snowmobiling can be a lot of fun for everyone in the family, but what is most important is to ride safe and ride sober."

"Most accidents are preventable if people just take the time to be responsible."

BC ombudsman will define society's values

"Beautiful British Columbia" is the boast of Canada's most blessed province. Spectacular mountains, a rich marine coastline and unique ecosystems and biota, are the basis for such gloating.

Like the Amazon rainforest, the temperate rain forests of North America's west coast are now recognized as priceless ecosystems affecting the entire planet. But over the past decade, increasingly rancorous confrontations between environmentalists, loggers and the forest industry, and aboriginal people leave the future of those forests in doubt.

During the last election, NDP Leader Mike Harcourt promised to resolve the forest wars by doubling the province's park system, establishing an overall land use strategy and setting up a mechanism to resolve disputes over contentious areas.

On January 21, as premier, Harcourt took a welcome first step to make good on the promises by appointing ombudsman Stephen Owen to head a new commission of resources an environment.

Focussing on Vancouver Island, where there have been

Reflections

by David Suzuki

several explosive confrontations and dozens of arrests, Harcourt declared an 18-month reduction or moratorium on logging in several contentious watersheds. Jobs have been retained by allowing cutting in other areas. In the past, forests were often logged even as its future was being debated, but once cut, there is no issue.

The challenge for Owen is formidable. He is charged with defining a land use strategy that will satisfy the seemingly intractable demands of natives, loggers, companies and environmentalists.

That strategy could be a model for the whole province and even other countries. We must wish him every success and hope that the government is prepared to act on his report when it's completed. To set a context for his deliberations, here are some observations.

The day after his appointment, Owen spoke on radio of the need to consider all demands on the forest — logging, tourism, fishing, Native land claims, etc. But he neglected to point out that human beings are not the only creatures with a stake in his decisions. Animals, plants and micro-organisms are the real indigenous inhabitants of the forest, indeed, they are the forest.

Scientists have only a glimmer of understanding of the biological complexity around us and they can't comprehend the intricate interspecies connections that perpetuate the cleansing, fertility and productivity of the land and oceans.

We share this planet with a community of countless other living beings who ensure our long-term survival and wealth. Forests must be protected in perpetuity if for no other reason than that intact ecosystems serve as living laboratories as hedges against our ignorance.

One of Owen's first tasks is to make an inventory of the forest. Incredible as it seems, we have been tearing at the fabric of the forests blanket-ing the province without even knowing what's there.

That inventory will be incomplete, list a fraction of all organisms that do live there as shown by the many newly discovered species in the canopy research platform in the Carmana Valley.

Furthermore, the inventory will focus on those species deemed of value to people but we should remember that the Pacific yew tree, long considered a weed species, has now been found to harbor compounds with powerful medicinal properties.

It will not be easy to resolve the competing interests for the forest because the values and time perspectives of the disputants are so very different.

Thus, for aboriginal people, maintenance of the integrity of land and its nonhuman inhabitants is central to their identity and continued survival as distinct people. Theirs is a spiritual relationship with the land that extends back beyond memory and ahead to future generations of unborn people.

We "newcomers" who arrived after Columbus have a radically different relationship with land. We tend to see it as a resource to be exploited for immediate economic needs that demand weekly or monthly paychecks and annual company profits and dividends.

Among environmentalists are those who wish to enjoy the esthetics of wilderness, others concerned with the quality of air, water and soil that impinge on us, and some who work to avoid a collapse of the global ecosphere. An environmental perspective looks back and ahead on a geological time scale.

Owen will define what we as a society value.

A target of protecting 12 to 14 per cent of our landbase seems to accept that we know enough to exploit the other 88 per cent without fear of the consequences. Do the people of British Columbia really have that confidence? I don't, but saving 12-14 per cent might be achievable.

Award recognizes caring, concerned individuals

Friday, March 13, 1992 is the deadline for nominations for the 1992 Fellowship in Applied Education Award. This honorary fellowship was created to recognize citizens who have demonstrated outstanding commitment, creativity and concern. In their career role or in their volunteer work, these candidates have put their ideas to practical use to benefit their local community or the world beyond.

Nominees must work and/or reside in the local communities of Victoria/Haliburton served by the Frost Campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College.

Last year, Phyllis Montemiglio was named the recipient of this Fellowship for her leadership in several offices and committees of the Lindsay Royal Canadian Legion, her volunteer duties with the St. John Ambulance Corps, as well as her accomplishments as a member of the Ross Memorial Hospital Ladies Auxiliary.

Remember, Friday, March 13 is the deadline. The award will be presented during the 25th Anniversary Convocation Exercises in May. Don't miss this opportunity to nominate a deserving candidate.

For a nomination form or more information, please contact: Norm Cooper (705)324-9144 or Gayle Hazel (705)749-5533.

Fed budget fails taxpayers

In this recession, Canadians across the country need action from Ottawa. Instead, we got a stand-still document on February 25 that abandons the unemployed and does nothing to beat back the recession.

People in Ontario needed a federal budget that would make genuine progress on job creation, and put people to work restructuring our economy. But the same government that brought us free trade, high interest rates, plant closings and the GST delivered another blow to Ontario families with a dead-end dose of service cuts.

The Mazankowski budget dumps Ottawa's deficit crisis into the laps of the provinces. This year, the Federal Tories cut another $4.5 billion in transfer payments to Ontario. We have to find that money on our own, in order to fund programs we are legally

Drainville Diary A report from Queen's Park

With Dennis Drainville, MPP

obligated to provide. Programs like education, health care, transportation networks. It may sound like just another dusty bureaucratic feud over balance-sheets. But that money pays for services that people in Ontario use and need — especially in the middle of a recession. And it means we have less money to meet new demands. As a result, more people will leave school and give up on getting better job skills. More women in crises will be turned away from overcrowded shelters. More families will be forced onto welfare.

The federal Tories did a little pre-election tinkering with the income tax structure, and the reluctantly adopted parts of Premier Bob Rae's plan to let people use RRSP funds to buy their own homes. But the budget draws a blank when it comes to ideas for renewing our economy and giving us the competitive edge we need to win new jobs and investment.

Ontario, several other provinces and many economists and even a few major banks all agree: we need major capital-works projects to get people working. We think it's smart to invest in things like more efficient airports and better research facilities. We want to make infrastructure improvement that will encourage recovery. And with many expenses deflated during a recession, capital projects started now cost taxpayers less than in boom times. But there's no action from Ottawa.

This budget fails those who need help the most. The federal government is sitting on its hands when we need energy, commitment, and co-operation. It's a failure for Canadians.

Acid rain report

The following report on precipitation events was recorded at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset and compiled by Environment Canada.

This report covers the period of February 23 to 29, 1992.

February 24, 3 cm of snow fell with a ph level of 4.2 and the air path was from Southern Ontario/Pennsylvania.

February 25, 4 mm of mixed rain and snow fell with a ph level of 3.9 and the air path was from Southern Ontario/Pennsylvania.

February 26, 3 cm of snow fell with a ph level of 4.5 and the air path was from Northern Michigan.

February 27, 4 cm of snow fell with a ph level of 4.7 and the air path was from Michigan/Lake Huron.

February 28, 9 cm of snow fell with a ph level of 4.7 and the air path was from Michigan.

Environmental damage to lakes and streams is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with ph less than 4.7. Ph readings less than 4.0 are serious.

COUNTY OF HALIBURTON NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING

Local Decision Making at stake!

The Governments of Canada and Ontario have recently agreed to implement a new system for funding, management and delivery of training. It is proposed that Counties of Haliburton, Victoria, Peterborough and Northumberland be joined to form a Local Training and Adjustment Board to coordinate all levels of training and adjustment programs within the proposed area. There would be about $12 million a year available within this County for training and training related expenditures.

The Local Training Board will have representatives from Business, Labour, Educators and Social Action Groups. Government wants our input and comments in April. We need your ideas to make a submission and some representatives of the County in this preliminary process.

Representatives of organizations from the four interest areas are invited to a short public meeting being held by the Interim County Organizing Group.

Technological advances make driving safer

When cruising along in the driver's seat and suddenly faced with making an emergency stop, within a split second you are forced to decide what to do and then react to the situation.

You can either suffer the consequences of doing nothing by allowing the obstruction to stop your vehicle, or you can use your brakes.

The way in which you use your brakes will determine how successful you will be in avoiding a collision.

You can stand on the pedal, lock the brakes and rely on the co-efficient of friction between the tire rubber and the road surface to stop you before you hit the obstruction, or utilize the technique of threshold braking.

If your vehicle is so equipped, you can also rely on the anti lock brake system to bring you to a stand still.

With the exception of the newer technology of anti lock brakes, threshold braking is the most effective way of stopping in the shortest distance.

To do it effectively takes practice and the technique should be tried on various road surface conditions such as dry, wet, icy and snow covered.

The technique consists of limiting foot pressure to the brake pedal to a point just prior to the wheels locking.

This ensures tire rubber adhesion to the road surface is not lost.

But threshold braking is fancy stuff and must be done

Thanks to computer technology, anti lock brakes only requires from the driver the most human of reactions in a collision avoidance manoeuvre.

subconsciously within the few seconds prior to collision.

For the average driver, this is a tall order.

Anti lock brakes are a simpler alternative.

Thanks to computer technology, this mechanical/electronic system only requires from the driver the most human of reactions in a collision avoidance manoeuvre, that is to apply full force to the brake pedal.

From there, sensors on the wheel hubs monitor the turning motion of the wheels and identify any that are in danger of locking.

The computer evaluates the situation, begins to limit hydraulic pressure to the appropriate wheels, thus ensuring all wheels continue to rotate, and so maximizing adhesion with the road surface.

This anti lock action allows you to continue to steer your car while braking hard, a practice unheard of, and fraught with danger on a vehicle not equipped with anti lock brakes.

However, anti lock brakes are not a substitute for driving carefully on slippery surfaces such as ice or hard-packed snow.

Bear this in mind always, and anti lock brakes could enhance your safety and well-being during the harsh winter months.

Anti lock brakes are a worthy option to consider when you are buying your next car.

Another safety measure to consider is the use of airbags.

Automobile collisions occur all too frequently on our roads and highways, claiming a high toll on human life.

There are two ways of reducing the injuries and fatalities suffered by vehicle occupants.

The first is to better educate motorists and encourage them to operate their vehicles more safely.

The second is to make the vehicle a safer environment for occupants.

Vehicle manufacturers have played a very responsible role in developing safety features designed to protect

BE A POWER SAVER

A better indoor environment is just one more reason to buy an R-2000 home.

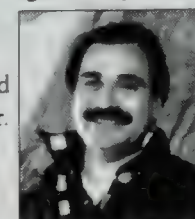

If you're considering the purchase of a new home, you should be aware that one type of home actually improves the environment inside your home for comfortable living all year round.

R-2000 EXCELLENCE

It's called the R-2000 home. A better indoor environment is just one reason the housing industry, Ontario Hydro, manufacturers and the provincial and federal governments support the R-2000 program. In fact, because of its energy efficiency, Ontario Hydro offers a $2,000 incentive for purchasers in areas where natural gas is unavailable.

In an R-2000 home, you control the ventilation with a heat recovery ventilator (HRV). There is no need for opening windows in the middle of winter or turning on noisy bathroom and kitchen fans. Humidity levels are automatically controlled. Even the incoming air in the winter is pre-warmed by extracting heat from stale exhaust air. This helps to reduce heating costs.

Look for the R-2000 Excellence symbol. Each R-2000 home is built by a certified R-2000 builder and tested to ensure it meets strict energy efficiency and ventilation standards.

"It's a more comfortable home to live in."

Vehicle safety features should be considered

vehicle occupants.

Some of these features are: the collapsible steering wheel, contoured and padded interiors, laminated windshields, and seat belts.

Another safety feature that is gaining in popularity with automobile manufacturers and consumers is an air cushion, more commonly referred to as an air bag.

An air bag is a "passive safety restraint system" which helps to reduce motor vehicle crash injuries, especially in collisions involving high speeds. In front or front-angle collisions, an air bag used with a seat belt offers the most effective protection available.

Upon a sufficient impact, the air bag inflates in exactly 1/25th of a second — less than half the time it takes to blink an eye.

Most air bags require a force greater than is generated when a car runs into a fixed barrier at 19 km/h to inflate.

It deflates a fraction of a second later, acting as a pillow, the air bag cushions the blow that occupants would otherwise receive as they contact the interior of the vehicle.

Crash forces are spread as gently as possible over a wide body area.

The next time you're in the market for a new vehicle, you may want to pay closer attention to the safety features that are designed into the model you are interested in.

Performance and handling are certainly important decision-making considerations. But so is safety.

You owe it to yourself and to your family to provide them with the safest travel environment possible.

Car costs add up

While going through showrooms filled with the 1992 line of car models, new car buyers should be aware that the buck doesn't stop at the dealership. Not by a longshot.

In CAA's "Car Costs 1991-1992" brochure, figures show that it now costs the average Canadian motorist about $6,891 per year or $574.25 per month to operate his or her automobile.

CAA's report is based on information provided by Runzheimer International, a management consulting firm that provides services to accurately measure costs of transportation, taxes, meals, goods and services, lodging and housing.

The car model used in calculating car costs is a 1991 Ford Tempo GL with a 2.3 litre, four cylinder engine.

"Car Costs 1991-1992" includes figures for both operating and ownership costs.

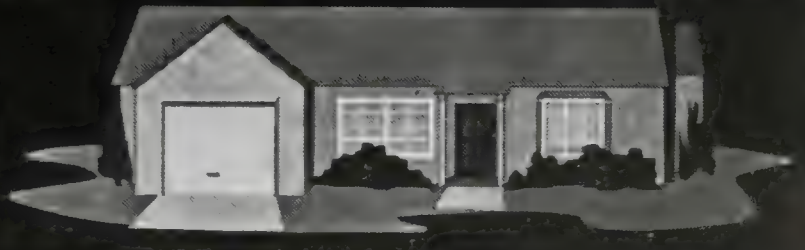

Operating costs are those which are directly related to the number of kilometres driven, and include gas and oil, maintenance and tire wear.

Ownership costs, however, change little with the amount driven. They include insurance, snow tires, licence and registration fees, depreciation, and finance expenses.

So, if you're in the market for a brand new car, or if you are happy with the one you have, remember to budget for all those little costs that go into everyday driving — because when you add them all up, they're not as little as you might think.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT NOTICE

COMPLETION OF HIGHWAY STUDY IMPROVEMENTS TO HIGHWAY 118

The Ministry of Transportation (M.T.O.) has completed a Preliminary Appraisal Report for the proposed upgrading of Highway 118 from 8.0 km east of Highway 35, easterly for 12.7 km. This project will involve:

- Minor re-alignment of several curves over a length of 2.2 km in the vicinity of West Guilford.
- Frost heave and pavement distortion repair.
- Resurfacing over the entire length.
- Intersection improvement at Haliburton County Road #7.

This study followed a Class Environmental Assessment process approved for projects of this type.

Following public and external agency contact and internal analysis and screening, it has been determined that this project will not result in any significant detrimental environmental effects. A memorandum outlining the findings of the screening procedure has been filed with The Environmental Assessment Branch of the Ministry of the Environment. Further documentation will not be prepared for this project and it may proceed to construction without additional notice.

If you feel, after consulting with M.T.O. staff, that serious environmental concerns remain unresolved, it is your right to request that an Environmental Study Report be prepared or that the project be subject to the formal Environmental Assessment review and approval process, possibly including a formal public hearing. The decision rests with the Minister of the Environment.

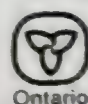

The review period for this project will terminate on:

April 13, 1992.

We are interested in hearing any comments or concerns you or your group may have about this project. If you wish to review the memorandum to M.O.E. or the Environmental study files, please contact:

The following is dedicated to Alma, who is confined to Minden Hospital.

There is a very special lady

That I have come to know
With a face that is still lovely

And hair as white as snow
Although she is confined to bed

Her smile lights up the room

And those sharp eyes of hers

Dispell the slightest gloom

She talks of swarming, buzzing bees

Amid her pretty flowers
And planting all her precious bulbs

Among bright leafy bowers

She is an inspiration for us all

For she fights the war of strife

A strife that will strike us all

A sweet respite from life -- from a friend, Yvonne.

The following was submitted to share with everyone:

Fishing is a great sport, I'd do it every day, If I won a million dollars, This is what I'd say...

Today I'm going fishing, I'm going to catch a trout, I'd work hard at my fishing, Of that there is no doubt.

I'd cast out my line,

With my secret bait, And when I felt a tug I just couldn't wait, "Is it three, four pounds," As I reel in the line, "Or is it record size, This fish of mine?" When out of the water, Comes my secret lure, Hooked to a fish so big, Why, It's twenty pounds or more.

The fish is sizzling in the pan;

It's going to taste so good. When suddenly I realize that for

The last half hour I've stood

I'm at the door and day dreaming;

My ticket didn't win - And I'm on my way to work.

Ah well, wishing is no sin!

Anon.

HELP WANTED

Sexual Assault/Incest Counsellor

The Haliburton County Counselling Centre, in conjunction with the Women's Health Care Centre, Peterborough, has recently received funding for an innovative program to assist women who are victims of sexual assault. Funding is initially for one year, with the possibility of permanent funding in the future. Haliburton County Counselling Centre is seeking a Sexual Assault Counsellor to work out of the Haliburton office three days per week. The successful candidate will have: University degree or community college diploma in social services or related field; 2 years experience counselling women; knowledge of rural women's issues; ability to work as part of a team. Competition closes March 15, 1992. Salary for part time position will be at $22,800. Send resume with a covering letter to: Michale James, Senior Therapist/Coordinator, Haliburton County Counselling Centre, P.O. Box 687, Haliburton, Ontario K0M 1S0. 705 457-5353. Fax: 457-5352. 2D3B

HELP WANTED

Tip #6: The Interview

The interview is your opportunity to prove to the employer that you are the best person for the job.

Be prepared!

- know something about the company
  - be on time
  - dress appropriately
  - have your list of references available to give to the interviewer
  - anticipate some common questions you might be asked and know what your response will be
  - be confident, express yourself positively and clearly
  - make a 1st good impression and stay calm - being prepared will help you overcome this.
- While in the interview listen carefully to find out as much as you can about the job and the type of manager you will work for. If you have questions, wait until the end of the interview to ask. Assess your performance after the interview and learn where you can improve for the next one. We have handouts on "The Interview". The Haliburton County Employment Centre.

CARDS OF THANKS

The family of Coral Pratt would like to thank the friends and local medical facilities, and local churches for their concern and prayers for Coral during her recent illness. Special thanks to a special community. Coral Pratt and her family.

The family of the late Pearl Mason would like to express their sincere gratitude and thanks to the many friends, neighbours and family who helped to make our loss a little easier by their acts of such kindness shown in their contributions of prayers, flowers, donations, telephone calls, food, babysitting and cards. A special thank you is expressed to Dr. H.C. Good, V.O.N. nurses and Homecare for their constant loving care. Also, a special thank you to the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home for their kindness and support during this time.

John Mason and Family.

IN MEMORIAM

DAVIS - In loving memory of a loving husband, father, grandfather and great grandfather, Frank, who left us March 10, 1991. There will always be a heart-ache, And often a silent tear, But always precious memories, Of days when you were here. We hold you close within our hearts, And there you will remain, To walk with us through all our lives, Until we meet again. Forever remembered and loved by wife Mae and family

DAVIS, Frank - In loving memory of our father, father-in-law, grandfather and great-grandfather who passed away March 10, 1991. Sadly missed along life's way, Quietly remembered every day, No longer in our lives to share, But in our hearts, you're always there. Sadly missed by Lois, Glen & Family

DAVIS, Frank - In loving memory of a dear Dad and grandfather, who passed away March 10, 1991. What we'd give if we could say, Hello Dad in the same old way. To hear your voice, see your smile, To sit with you and chat a while. So you who have a father cherish him with care, For you'll never know the heart-ache, Till you see his vacant chair. Forever in our hearts and sadly missed by daughter, Doreen, son, Willis, son-in-law, John, grandson, Johnny

IN MEMORIAM

MINTZ, Mervel - In loving memory of my son Mervel who passed away February 28, 1990. As time unfolds another year, Memories keep you ever near. Silent thoughts of time together, Hold love and memories, That will last forever. Ever remembered and loved, Dad

WARBURTON: In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Joe, who passed away March 14, 1988. Loving and kind in all his ways, Upright and just to the end of his days, Sincere and kind in heart and mind, What a beautiful memory he left behind. Always remembered by Glen, Marg and family.

WARBURTON: In loving memory of my dear husband Joe, who passed away March 14, 1988. Four years have passed since that sad day, When the one we loved was called away, We miss him so, since he has gone, But know that we must carry on, Until the time we too much go. Always remembered by his wife Lila.
